BOSTON, MA (January 25, 2017) – Loomis, Sayles & Company announced today the addition of Michael Meyer, CFA, as a securitized strategist for illiquid and real assets on the securitized asset team. He is based in the company's Boston office and reports to Alessandro Pagani, head of securitized assets.

In this newly created role, Michael will focus on identifying and capturing private debt/equity investment opportunities for clients across a broad range of financial and real assets. He will assist in structuring and managing investment solutions that address client needs by collaborating with existing members of the securitized asset team to leverage their credit skills, market relationships, and deep knowledge in real estate, consumer and commercial assets.

“We are very pleased to welcome Michael to our team,” said Alessandro Pagani. “His expertise will allow us to not only leverage the market insight we have from managing large portfolios in the securitized area, but develop adjacent strategies to best address the evolving needs of investors seeking to move beyond traditional stocks and bonds.”

The 16 person securitized team provides strategy recommendations, research and trading on more than $23.6 billion of securitized assets held across Loomis Sayles products. The team also manages directly $5.7 billion<sup>1</sup> across dedicated securitized strategies.

Prior to this, Michael was vice president and senior analyst at Liberty Harbor, an affiliate of Goldman Sachs Asset Management, where he was responsible for developing investment views on public securities based on fundamental analysis across a wide range of sectors.
