KAIRUI HUO

Kairui Huo is a senior investment analyst for the alpha strategies group at Loomis, Sayles & Company. He is responsible for conducting quantitative research on fixed income sectors to explore alpha-added factors and assisting with the construction of fixed income portfolios that maximize return potential. Kai joined Loomis Sayles in 2017 from OmniMarkets, where he was a quantitative analyst, responsible for providing risk management, model validation and trading strategy back-test services to clients. Previously, he was an assistant to a portfolio manager at the Bank of Communications in China, where he helped in updating clients on latest performance and predications of future performance. Kai earned a BEng from the Nanjing University of Science & Technology and an MS from Rutgers University.